"Hates To Cook, Loves Hats"

Mrs. Giles C. Engledove, the former Eloise Atwood of Appomattox, was featured Sunday, April 5, in a lengthy feature in the Richmond Times-Dispatch.

The author Betty Parker Ashton writes that Mrs. Engledove has probably been addressed as "Madam President" more than any other woman in the city of Richmond.

Mrs. Engledove now first woman president of the Virginia Association for the Prevention of Blindness, has served as president of the Va. Federation of Women's Clubs, and many other organizations plus serving on the boards of many others including Red Cross, Heart Association, Muscular Dystrophy, League of Planned Parenthood, American Cancer Society.

She hates to cook and loves hats believing that a "hat completes a woman's costume."

Aside from her club work she has come to believe that the success or failure of an enterprise, from a woman's club to the nation, depends on the strength or weakness of its leaders.

"God comes first, your family comes next and your responsibilities to your community come third," is her motto, "If you meet these responsibilities, you will lead a full and good life."
